FULL COURT SUSTAINS CHENG KWOK-YAU'S MURDER CONVICTION

HUMILIATION DAY, PLANNED FOR SHANGHAI

Nation Mourns For Northern Losses.

BIG DEMONSTRATION

(From Our Own Correspondent.)
Shanghai, To-day.

Preparations are afoot for the observance of Humiliation Day on September 18, the anniversary of the march of Japanese troops in Manchuria and the first occupation of the soil of that province by Japan.

There will be a complete suspension of work in all Government offices throughout China and a five minute's silence will be observed officially.

Places of musement have been ordered to close for the day and the Chinese Chamber of Commerce here, together with other large public bodies, are arranging mass meetings.

While authorities are not particularly apprehensive, precautions are being taken, especially in the Hongkew area, to prevent any clash between Chinese and Japanese in that neighbourhood. There will be extra police patrols and probable Japanese bluejacket parties abroad, to see that there are no hostile or rowdy movements on one side or the other.

OMAR IMPRESSES ON Shanghai Green.

Hampton's Hand Causes Anxiety.

PLAYING LUSITANO CLUB
TO-DAY.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)
Shanghai, To-day.

The Hong Kong Interport Bowls team arrived here yesterday and were immediately taken to the Palace Hotel where they are staying during their time in Shanghai.

In the afternoon the team were given a preliminary practice on the S.L.B.C. green, and all gave a very favourable display. U. M. Omar, the senior interporter in the side, was particularly steady, and showed that the trip North had not effected him in the least. H. Hampton was not so steady, his injured hand appearing to give him trouble.

The visitors are scheduled to meet the Lusitano Club and will be the guests of honour at the Lusitano Club in the evening.

RIVER STEAMER IN COLLISION.

Fishing Junk Is Damaged.

Damage to the extent of $300 was suffered by a fishing junk, as the result of a collision with the river steamer Yuet On, in the harbour off West Point, yesterday morning.

The Yuet On was proceeding to Kowloon, when the mishap occurred. No person on either craft was injured.

The master of the Yuet On, according to a Police report, promised to meet the cost of damages, and proceeded to Kowloon.

UNREGISTERED MUI TSAI

For keeping an unregistered mui tsai a Chinese woman fined $250 on her appearance before Mr. Fraser at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning. Defendant lived at Temple Street. No cruelty was alleged.

EIGHT PERSONS LOST ON OCEAN FLIGHT

TWO LITTLE GIRLS IN VANISHED PLANE

TRAWLER'S VAIN QUEST

Copenhagen, To-day.

Grave fears are entertained for the lives of eight persons who were attempting to reach Britain by air across the North Atlantic, flying from America via Greenland. The missing are Mr. and Mrs. J. Hutchison, wealthy Americans, their two little daughters, aged six and eight, and four members of the crew of their big machine.

An "S.O.S." call was received at Angmagssalik, Greenland, from the flying family, reporting a forced landing in the sea just off the coast of Greenland. The party had hopped off from Julianahab, north-east of Cape Desolation, and had cut across the southern tip of Greenland to fly up the coast towards Angmagssalik.

The British trawler Lord Talbot, in adjacent waters, picked up the distress calls which the ill-fated machine was rapping out periodically, and headed at full speed towards the point indicated by the messages. Contact between the trawler and the plane was maintained for over an hour while the sturdy little craft churned north with all the power she possessed.

Signals failed to get any response from the plane, finally. But the trawler kept on, her crew still hoping that they might be in time.

At dusk the trawler hove to at the spot which their messages indicated the plane had come down. But there was no sign of the missing ship. They searched in every direction, but found nothing.

Called "Foolhardy."

When Hutchison and his wife arranged to fly from New York to Edinburgh, by way of the Greenland coast, Iceland and a sea hop over to the Scottish coast, many branded their venture as foolhardy. Such was the confidence of these two enthusiasts. (Continued on Page 6.)

DULEEPSINHJI NOT FOR AUSTRALIA.

To Go To Switzerland
For His Health.

London, To-day.

It has been officially stated that K. S. Duleepsinhji, the Sussex captain, will be unable to tour Australia with the English cricketers, as he will be leaving for Switzerland shortly for health reasons.

This statement was made from Newnham's House, Staines, yesterday.—Reuter.

Duleepsinhji was kept out of the Sussex side during their last few vital matches by extremely painful attacks of neuritis, and the M.C.C. selectors thought it advisable to invite Paynter, the young Lancashire batsman to make the trip as a reserve.

"No Surrender" In Dublin

De Valera Sounds
A Warning.

MUST MAKE SACRIFICES

London, To-day.

"There must be no talk of surrender," declared Mr. Eamon de Valera, in a speech at Killenny, re-affirming Ireland's intention to withhold the land annuities from England.

"If we are going to fight and win, we must be prepared for sacrifices, for it is no soft bargain with Britain," he said.—Reuter.

SHANGHAI SEES NEW DISORDERS

Police Mobilised For
"Red" Threat.

BORDERS UNDER GUARD

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Shanghai, To-day.

The gravest Communist disorders were only narrowly averted by the prompt mobilisation of French Concession and Nantao police yesterday. Throughout the day, guards stood at the locked iron gates that separate the French quarter from the native city on the south.

Beyond the gates and the watching Annamite police, armed with rifles, masses of shouting, jostling people struggled in the streets of Nantao, while officers of the Bureau of Public Safety clubbed and threatened the more surely and arrested the objectionable.

The meaning and purpose of the demonstration are vague. It was learned that Communists had organised an enormous indignation parade, for some purpose or other, and it was hurriedly pointed out by Nantao authorities that there was every likelihood of the disorders spreading into the French and Foreign Settlements.

Special patrols, armed to the teeth, were despatched to duty in Nantao. Machine gun squads paraded. Big guards were rushed to the North and South Stations to prevent any sort of vandalism there.

Early in the morning, French police squads took post at the border of the Concession. At the first hint of untoward activity, they had instructions close the gates. The gates remained closed almost all day, for it was not until sundown that the par. lers dispersed.

There were few casualties. The occurrence, however, has served to add a greater weight of apprehension to the minds of Shanghai residents, whose peace is disturbed by disorders of some sort or other almost daily.

DOLLAR REMAINS UNCHANGED.

Slight Rise In Silver.

The dollar remained steady and stands at 1/4 1/2d.

A slight rise was shown in silver, spot being quoted at 18 1/2 and forward at 18 3/4.

London on New York cross-rate is quoted at £-G33.49, and the New York on London rate at £-G33.49 1/2.

RAIN POSTPONES SUNDAY NUDIST OUTING

Members State Determination To Continue

Bad weather yesterday upset the plans for the third nudist outing to their stamping ground at Lock Pick Sheung, no members of the cult turning up at the Kowloon Railway Station. The river, which has to be crossed and re-crossed to reach the plot of land rented to the cult, was higher than usual owing to the rains of Saturday. Despite the approach of colder weather, members state that they will continue their Sunday outings.—Reuter.

STUDENT RIOT LEADERS ARE EXECUTED

Four Pay Supreme Penalty For Paotingfu Conduct

Peiping, To-day.

The four ring-leaders of the serious student riots at Paotingfu in July last, were executed before a firing squad to-day.

There is high indignation among many student-friends and some sources report rumours of some sort of reprisals.—Reuter.

NO RANSOM DEMANDED FOR CAPTIVES

Bandits Did Not Ask For $250,000 Ransom.

H.M.S. SANDWICH ARRIVES
AT NEWCHWANG

Newchwang, To-day.

It is officially announced that there is no truth in the report that the captors of Mrs. Pawley and Mr. Corkran have demanded a ransom of $250,000.

Contact has not been established with the bandits. H.M.S. Sandwich has arrived to watch the situation.—Reuter.

The following wireless message received from H.M.S. Sandwich states:

The Consul at Newchwang states that there is no truth whatever in the statement that ransom has been paid as contact has not been established with the captors.

It urgently desires that this erroneous report be suppressed as it is likely to lead to relaxation of the efforts to trace the captors and establish contact.

Monarchists Sent To Africa.

Madrid, To-day.

Fifty-five Monarchist political deportees, mostly Grandeas, and including relatives of ex-King Alfonso Don-Alfonso and Don-Francisco Bourbon have been sent to Cadiz from Prison, en route to Spanish West Africa.—Reuter.

The reading of a letter from Government relative to the Board's recommendation of July 19, 1932, year, concerning refuse removal, is amongst the business to be discussed at the meeting of the Sanitary Board to be held at 4.15 p.m. to-day.

DEFENCE TO APPEAL TO PRIVY COUNCIL

SENTENCE TO BE PASSED ON WEDNESDAY

CROWDED COURT HEARS DECISION

The conviction of Cheng Kwok-yau, youthful son of a wealthy Malay Chinese family, found guilty of procuring the murder of a rival in love, George Fung, was affirmed by the Full Court to-day.

Chief Justice Sir Joseph Kemp, who presided at the trial of the accused, agreed with the judgment of Mr. Justice J. R. Wood, with whom he heard the argument for the quashing of conviction, and their joint findings handed down this morning, declared the evidence of the Crown to which the defence so strongly objected, was in their minds admissible.

Cheng will be sentenced on Wednesday next, it was announced.

Immediately upon hearing the judgment, Mr. R. C. H. Lim, re-presenting the accused, declared that it was the intention of the defence to appeal to the Privy Council.

A large number of prominent personages were present in the Court this morning, including the Attorney-General, Hon. Mr. C. G. Alabaster, K.C., and Sir Henry Pollock, K.C. The Court was crowded, hundreds arriving before 9 o'clock.

Mr. Lim reminded their Lordships that appeal was being applied for to the Privy Council, and said it would help the defence if their Lordships would state whether or not this case, in their opinion, was one of general and public importance, and to have it so noted on record.

He referred to the case of Rex v. Abraham (1914), in which the Chief Justice respite sentence for three months with a view to allowing the prisoner to apply for special leave to appeal to the Privy Council.

Doubts His Power.

Sir Joseph Kemp, referring to the latter part, said that the Full Court was not a Court of Sentence and the point would have to be decided by him personally. He would only like to say that he was not aware that he had that power.

The Chief Justice added—

"We are not prepared to accede to your requests, Mr. Lim, to state in our opinion whether the case is one of general importance or not. The prisoner will be brought up for sentence on Wednesday, the 14th, at 10 a.m."

Complete Agreement.

Giving judgment the Chief Justice said—"I agree generally with the judgment which has just been delivered by my learned brother. I should like to add another reason why, in my opinion, the evidence objected to is admissible. Perhaps the additional reason is only a restatement, from a different point of view, of the reasons already given.

Whether one fact tends to prove another is, speaking broadly, a matter of common mental processes. As it is put in Halsbury's Laws of England, Volume 18 at page 439 in paragraph 611: "In the vast majority of cases the law will accept as evidence those matters which are indicated as such by the ordinary course of human experience."

Some matters which ordinary reasoning would admit are definitely excluded by the rules of legal evidence for various sound reasons, e.g., involuntary confessions because of the great risk that they may not be true, bad character because of its dangerously prejudicial nature and small evidentiary value towards proving the single act alleged, and hearsay, because it is not, on oath, cannot be tested by cross-examination, opens a door to fraud, is less reliable by reason of its being second-hand, and would tend to protract legal inquiries and to encourage the substitution of weaker for stronger evidence. I think, however, that if ordinary intelligent reasoning would accept a fact as probative of the main fact alleged, as it undoubtedly would accept the evidence objected to in the present case, some such definite rule of legal exclusion must be found applicable before it can be shut out.

"I think that no such rule is applicable here. The mere fact that evidence discloses another offence does not alone exclude it. Here the evidence was not offered to show that the accused was of a bad character."

Beauty Hints For The Hot Weather

Women Should Be At Best In Summer

Useful Treatment

The majority of women and girls look their best in summer. But there are some who get faces the colour of beetroot and noses which will shine in spite of repeated applications of powder. Others let the sun scorch their necks and backs until they are red and sore. During a spell of hot weather, the usual beauty treatments must be changed.

Cleansing cream is necessary and a cooling lotion used instead of the usual astringent is soothing. Never use water on a scorched skin. It will merely aggravate the burn. And be careful that skin foods are really pure. There are various creams made which are composed of special ingredients which can be used to prevent this painful state of affairs. The aim and ambition of most people away on holiday, is to get really tanned. If it is done gradually and is not too deep a colour, it looks most attractive. But real sunburn leaves many skins a dirty yellow afterwards. This is difficult to bleach to the original shade again, and is not becoming when one returns to town life.

A Good Remedy. Here is rather a good "remedy" for faces which will become moist and uncomfortable in hot weather. You will want one drachm of lavender water, one drachm of tincture of myrrh, and half a drachm of borax. A chemist will make it up for you, or you can do it yourself, taking care to mix the ingredients really well. The face should be gently bathed with the lotion.

Hands which become hot and sticky in the heat, need a different sort of treatment. The following is simple and quite effective: To one pint of hot water use one teaspoonful of borax. Plunge the hands into this. Leave them in about five minutes. Dry thoroughly. Most red hands are due to cold weather, but there are some unfortunate girls whose hands always will take on this unbecoming hue.

A home-made remedy which will help sufferers of red hands, is composed of the following: Separate the white of an egg from the yolk. Beat it up, with one grain of alum—but not too stiff. Spread over the hands at bed-time. Slip on a pair of old loose white gloves and leave on till the morning.

Cure For Sea Rash. Those of you on holiday or about to take one, will no doubt spend many hours sea-bathing, so these few hints on "sea-rash" will no doubt be of interest. Some skins are very susceptible to "sea-rash," which appears in the form of little water pimples on the hands and arms and is most irritating. The only thing to do is to wear gloves. Loose chamols gloves are best. As one becomes accustomed to the strong sea air and sun, the gloves can be discarded. In the very hot weather, the feet sometimes become very swollen, and tired. If they are bathed in hot boracic lotion, it will soothe and ease them.

Light and air and sunshine are as good for the head and hair as for other parts of the body. So when it is not too hot, brush and comb the hair before the open window or in the sunlight, and you will be surprised how this invigorates it. Hair needs more frequent washing or shampooing in the hot weather, as it gets sticky, particularly when you are hot. It is not wise to wear close-fitting hats in the warm weather, as no air can penetrate and the scalp will get irritated. Straws, lins, or any kind light material should be chosen for a hat, so that air and sunlight can get through it.

If you are inclined to get dandruff, the enemy of hair beauty, be sure, before you attempt home treatment, which type it is. There is the dry and the greasy. A little olive oil rubbed into the scalp will help to remove the dry variety of this hair ailment.

Must Be Patient.

Should your hair begin to fall out, castor oil massaged into the scalp, a little every night, will in time allay it and help to make new strong hair grow. It must be frequently shampooed to remove the dust-laden grease which will accumulate on each hair. But do not expect magic. Hair which is in bad condition may take months of patient treatment to restore it to health and beauty. Do not stop brushing when the hair falls. Unless the root is dead, a new one will grow in place of each one that comes out. Many people prefer to shampoo their hair at home, but find it is difficult to set well.

If your hair is very thick, it is more comfortable and easier to manage if a hairdresser thins it out properly. Nothing is more unpleasant than thick wedges of hair at the back of the neck, and each side behind the ears, just the places where it grows thickest. This applies particularly to people who have "heavy" rather coarse hair. Fine hair rarely needs thinning. Should you be one of those who have retained long hair or regrown it, then this thinning process is a great help in making "buns" or "rolls" smaller, and therefore cooler.

WIDE CHOICE FOR SMART WOMEN.

Slim Budget Cannot Spoil Effects.

ECCENTRIC DESIGNS.

One can say quite truthfully that the choice of the woman who aspires to dress smartly, in design, colour and material, is practically limitless. Thus, because there seems to be more temptation to run amok than be restrained, advice about clothes tends to be negative, write Dore Charmon.

Every woman who has pretensions to good dressing (and haven't we all, regardless of our income?) has never had greater need to think twice, and then again, before deciding upon an outfit.

We can no longer be guided by what appeals to us, we must concentrate upon what our figure will allow us to wear with any degree of grace. It is useless to deny that many of us are physically unsuited to present-day fashions.

Unfortunately the masculine trend in dress was a bad training ground. We let our figures "go" where to-day the spotlight is turned on them. I am writing of course, of those figures who seem to combat chic at every curve.

Alternative Ways.

There are two ways of achieving smartness. The woman who cannot carry off an original model should remember that she is likely to earn more praise by avoiding bright colours or two-colour schemes, sticking unreservedly to the shade that suits her best—green, blue or grey—with a foundation of black or navy. Navy is the smarter colour this season.

Then the woman who can create a mild sensation by wearing one of the most "difficult" frocks of the season should play her card while she holds it. There is great value in what are known as eccentric designs; successfully worn they are often the forerunner of a vogue. They are the "high spots" in a gathering of fashionable women without detracting a scrap from the charm of the more conventionally attired.

A short time ago I was at a party where a young woman appeared in an Empire gown, taken from a fashion journal of the past. She looked lovely. Everybody thought so.

A few days later I met her somewhere else. This time she was equally delightful in a gown of white cotton pique, beautifully cut.

How did she manage to look so well in such different types of design? Well, she is an artist in wearing eccentric designs. She shows the multitude how they should look if they wish to wear extravagant modes.

In the hands of such exceptional women the average slave of fashion should be content to leave these models.

A sense of proportion is essential to-day.

Cover top of mixture in casserole with biscuits and bake in a hot oven until biscuits are thoroughly baked and brown on top. Allow about 35 minutes for baking the biscuits because the sauce, meat and vegetables retard the baking. Serve from baking dish.

TASTY VEGETABLE AND VEAL PIE.

Little Hint For The Menu Planner.

A veal and vegetable pie can be made as follows:

One pound lean veal, 1 cup tiny cooked onions, 1 cup diced cooked carrots, 1 cup cooked green peas, 2 cups cooked potato marbles, 2 teaspoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, salt and pepper, 1 1/4 cups flour, 2 1/2 teaspoons baking powder, 2 tablespoons shortening, 1/2 teaspoon salt, milk.

Choose veal from small part of leg, since it is usually cheaper, and the meat must be cut in small pieces anyway. Cover with boiling water and simmer until tender but not broken. Add salt and let cool in stock, overnight if convenient. Remove fat and bone from meat, making neat pieces for serving.

Arrange meat in a buttered casserole. Remove fat from stock and strain through cheesecloth. There should be about 2 cups of stock. The liquid in which vegetables except the onions, were cooked can also be used. Melt butter, stir in flour and when mixture bubbles, add stock, stirring constantly. Bring to the boiling point and season with salt and pepper. Add prepared vegetables to meat in casserole and pour over sauce. Mix and sift flour, salt and baking powder. Rub in shortening and cut in milk with a knife. Use enough milk to make a safe dough.

Roll on a floured molding board and cut with a small biscuit butter. (Continued at foot of preceding Column.)

MILLIONS UNFIT FOR PARENTS.

Sterilization Might Help The Race.

AMERICAN SUGGESTION.

Eighteen millions of us are so unfit to be fathers and mothers that the only remedy is to sterilise the lot. This is reported as the gist of a proposal emanating from the Human Betterment Foundation of Pasadena, California, and distributed in printed form among members of the American Association for the Advancement of Science at its recent Syracuse meeting, says The Literary Digest.

Apparently the proposal did not meet with favour.

Are 18,000,000 either actually or potentially so weak in the head that we will cost the community one billion a year because of our crimes and our inability to fend for ourselves? The figures, opines the New York Times, are preposterous on their very face. Says this paper on its editorial page:

"The means for postponing the doom foreshadowed is sterilisation of the unfit, now legally permissible in twenty-seven States, and assiduously practised by California.

Marriage Impossible.

"Where hereditary feeble-mindedness has been clearly established, no sane person would countenance marriage. But with the discover of genes, the infinitesimal units of inheritance which may be combined in thousands of different ways, the old Galtonian enthusiasm for eugenic matings is dampened.

"Hereditarily turns out to be a much more complicated business than was supposed. While a feeble-minded couple will always produce feeble-minded offspring, the evidence is clear that normal persons also carry defective genes which may manifest themselves in an insane progeny.

Children Suffer.
"The studies of Dr. R. A. Fisher indicate that about 11 per cent. of the feeble-minded of any generation are the direct offspring of feeble-minded, while 89 per cent. come from matings among the seemingly sound.

"Even if we discovered the carriers of hidden defective genes by applying the methods of the cattle breeder to humanity, the process would take about a thousand years, in the opinion of so high an authority as Prof. H. S. Jennings.

"The more the evolutionist experiments with plants, fruit-flies and animals, the more convinced is he that it takes both environment and heredity to make us the men and women that we are, and the less inclined is he to lay down infallible principles for changing us into paragons."

with cinnamon. Serve warm or cold.

Cherry Pudding.
1 cup sugar
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1/2 cup water
3 tablespoons butter
2 cups flour
4 tablespoons baking powder
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 tablespoons lard
1 egg
2 1/2 cup milk
Mix cherries, sugar, lemon juice, water and butter. Pour into shallow pan. Mix flour, baking powder and salt. Cut in lard. Add egg and milk. Pour this soft dough over cherries. Make four holes in top. Bake 25 minutes in moderate oven.

FAME OF MAYFLOWER AND NEW PLYMOUTH*THEORIES OF DR. FREUD BEAR UPON PURITAN

MISS CARLISLE'S NOVEL

(By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN)

New York. "We Begin," this new book is named, and it is wholly American. The founding of Plymouth is so encrusted with myth, so much a part of the generality of every American child's common school education, that it is literally thought-stopping to try to think of it in any other than two standardised ways. Save for an occasional tough-minded soul like Samuel Eliot Morison, we are like Pavlov's dogs in the matter; ring the bell of "Puritan" or "Pilgrim" in the mind, and one of two visions is conjured up, depending upon the conditioning of the reflexes—either the dully heroic vision of the monument to the founding fathers at Provincetown on Cape Cod, or the vision of a dour, life-denying stalwart in whom the milk of Elizabethan amplitude had somehow curdled.

G. K. Chesterton, for example, invariably makes the latter response; it matters little to him that the Puritans and Separatists, small tradespeople with a tradition of independence going "back" into Lollard England, had had little share in the spaciousness of Elizabeth's day, and hence were bound to be a trifle grim, even in an England called "merrie." The bell rings in the anti-Puritan mind, and, willy-nilly, the blanket blame goes out without any immediate marking of extenuating circumstances.

Miss Carlisle, a venturesome novelist who is always off on a new tack, tries to line up with real free-thinkers like Mr. Morison. It is quite evident that her research has been complete; indeed, her book runs so suavely that one pays her the supreme compliment of being hardly aware of the preliminary work behind it. She knows that neither Pilgrim nor Puritan were Victorian—that their expression was salty and masculine, for there is Governor Bradford's history of Plymouth-plantation to prove it, not to mention Governor Winthrop's Boston diary, which even verges on pruriency. She knows, too, that "freedom to worship God" was often an unconscious euphemism for "freedom to make a living." And she has tried to hold the balance true in her stylized narrative—a narrative that adopts a faintly formal running tone, with no incursion into the "prithes" that were once the bane of this type of fiction.

Modern Consciousness.

But Miss Carlisle's consciousness is modern, as "See How They Run" and "Mothers Cry" have shown, and it is possible although, short of the ability to read "our ancestors' minds, we have no adequate means of knowing that she has had an inartistic benefit of the hindsight of modern psychology in building up her narrative. Her main personages are three—John and Eleazar Dexter, two brothers of Scrooby, and Anne, whom both John and Eleazar want and whom John marries.

The symbolism here is pat: John is the lover of life, while Eleazar, the older brother, is the man of God whose carnal urges are shunted off into religious channels—the stock figure of Freudian romance who is forever confusing desire for Sadie Thompson with the mandate to "save her soul." And, as the formula specifies, the man of God capitulates, at the end, to his baser self—in this case to a desire for a London wife who is found aboard the Mayflower at sea and who is brought up by Anne Dexter as one of her own brood. There is, as a measure of poetic justice, a hanging at the close that comes with too even-handed a retribution.

Freudian Symbolism.

Now all this Freudian symbolism may be true to universal human nature, and hence to the time of which Miss Carlisle writes. But in making Anne aware of the identity of Eleazar's lust and his hunger for God it is entirely possible that the author is taking a little too much from the Freudian arsenal. It is not surprising that the modern sensibility, looking back at this "World's End" novel, should find the identity for Eleazar's sensibility is very palpably present in another instance.

The Pilgrims are at sea, having sailed from Plymouth after a sojourn for so many disappointing years among the Dutch. A sailor, a surly fellow, has cursed the Pilgrims for being "chicken-livered," and the next day dies. Eleazar thinks it is the judgment of God. But Anne writes: "Yet I could not help but think perhaps the fellow had been ill all the voyage, and that perhaps accounted for his spleen." This was in 1620, eight years before the publication of Harvey's discourse on the circulation of the blood and long before the birth of the hormone. Does Anne here ring true in terms of such an explicitly formulated thought—especially when the accounting hinges on a "perhaps"?

The question of sensibilities, then and now, to one's side, "We Begin" is a thoroughly fine piece of work. Its appeal is the appeal of "Swiss Family Robinson"—an appeal that ought to be strong in 1932, when farmers are actually going back to a primitive barter economy and when city folk are wondering how, in the event of vanished urban resources, they might scabble a living from a long-deserted soil.

Pleasing Pictures.

The picture of John Dexter planting corn with herring for fertilizer, of the founding fathers digging clams, trapping lobsters, fishing for cod and gathering berries, has the freshness that will never be lost upon a human race that is, periodically, forced to consider the physical bases of life. Cut the love affairs from "We Begin" completely and the narrative remains a vivid chronicle, in terms of the stylized musings of two men and a woman, of the time that elapsed between the sailing of the separatists from the northeast coast of England for asylum among the Dutch and the firm

Africa Tales For Children

Frank Worthington's Latest Volume.

African animal tales recorded by the author, Frank Worthington, who spent twenty-two years in Africa and heard these stories told many times over around the evening campfire, are contained in "The Little Wise One." In his introduction he explains how these original, simple stories were carried with them by the Negroes who were shipped to the West Indies and to the Southern States of North America and there, modified to suit another continent, became the tales that Joel Chandler Harris collected in his Uncle Remus volumes. The author explains also his theory that Aesop's Fables originated in much the same fashion as the Uncle Remus stories and points out the frequent similarity between the African stories and the fables of Aesop. Boys and girls, however, will leave these questions to the students of folklore and will enjoy these direct, simple tales which chronicle the cleverness of the hare, "the little wise one," who is always the hero. The book has the spontaneity and humour that children enjoy, and while no boy or girl should be allowed to miss Uncle Remus, with its richer interest and its importance to American children, these tales can be read by younger children because of the absence of dialect and might be used in some cases as an introduction to Joel Chandler Harris's volumes. The author has illustrated the book simply but adequately, and his line drawings have a touch of humour pleasing to children. For boys and girls 5 to 10.

establishment, out of agony, sweat, blood and tears, of Plymouth plantation in the wilderness given to the Plymouth Company to exploit. The lists of tools, of plants and seeds, of skulls, wood trenchers, pot claws, wicks, beer, rice, dried apples, herbs for physic and so on, have a fascination of their own.

Miss Carlisle's handling of the relations of the Plymouth settlement with the Indians is intelligent.

POTEMKIN IS DISPLAYED

By HOWARD DEVREE

Catherine the great is one of those rulers seemingly doomed to remain a vague impression in the minds of most people. She lived on after the French Revolution got under way and after the United States had become a nation, yet in many ways she seems as remote as Mohammed or the Great Cham.

Starting as a kind of Cinderella of fifth-rate German princessdom, the composite portrait which has come into existence in a century and a half since her death is a blur of Messalina, Machiavelli and Queen Elizabeth.

A recent years Katharine Anthony has attempted with some degree of success to psychoanalyze the woman rather than the Empress, and Bernard Shaw has exploded about her legendary figure some of his less notable fireworks. One might hope for a Strachey or a Guedalla to bring a legend to life, and to make real the woman and the Empress in the midst of the life of the time—a full and flowing time whose many cross-currents make it such a deep-sea mine for the treasure-seeking historian.

Keyhole Peering. What Francis Gribble has done, however, in "The Comedy of Catherine the Great," is to present a very limited combination of puppet show and keyhole peering. If one does not care for stiff-jointed marionettes in a rather meaningless procession against a scanty background—and seen through a small aperture—then Mr. Gribble's reader will be disappointed. However good his intentions may have been, the effect is of a long-drawn-out and dull attempt at mild sensationalism, an effect that Mr. Gribble himself would probably be the first to disavow.

Granting him the intention of painting the Empress as "neither so great as she seemed to Voltaire nor so licentious as she seemed to Laveaux," she remains in such a portrait as he achieves scarcely more than a two-dimensional marionette. He expresses a hope that he has made her appear more human and more womanly than she appeared to others and that he has made manifest her charm; what he has done is rather to present an essentially sentimental, vain, amorous, lavish, opportunistic woman who leaned on a succession of favourites for personal relaxation while Potemkin pulled the strings—even the strings, by which her favourites were in turn summoned to her side.

The Limitations.

Perhaps it would be fairer to Mr. Gribble to note the limitations he has wittingly or unwittingly set for himself and what was then left for him to do. First of all, then, he has apparently made little or no effort to paint a realistic background for his marionette—no revealing picture of life, times, manners, international relations or of the expansion of Russia itself. Next, he has apparently made little or no effort to get inside the mind of his subject, preferring to let objective fact and conflicting anecdotes speak for themselves. He has moreover, permitted his narrative to follow the chronological succession of favourites who appear and disappear as if moved by subsidiary leading-lines without any seeming effect on Catherine herself. In the midst of this procession Catherine's progress is halted from time to time while her manipulator diverts the attention of his audience from the puppets' cessation of movement with anecdotes, or a turning aside to comment on some extraneous matter.

Jerky Progress.

All this results in a somewhat disconcerting manner by imparting to the chronicle a jerky and disjointed progression. Certainly the book would be vastly improved for the reader brought up on the concise interpretative biography of recent years if the material had been arranged less with an eye on passive chronology and more with an insight into human motivation and national significance, if it were less a pageant of puppets and more a divining by the spirit-sense of the hidden human and historical treasure in poorly charted seas.

Assuredly Catherine was a glamorous enough person and her times sufficiently interesting for any biographer. It has been said that Peter the Great parodied Europe and that Catherine flirted with it—or, as Mr. Gribble puts it, she looked westward from a window on the Neva. But Catherine herself was a native of Stettin and spent the first fifteen years of her life under German influences. Superimposed on a semi-Oriental background and transferred to a court where Mr. Gribble is fond of repeating that anything might happen, her subsequent career requires careful analysis and explanation rather than a sloughing off of the historian's responsibilities behind the possibility of incredible things coming to be.

DEDICATION.

It has flown now to the impenetrable black spaces behind the farthest star;
I call and I call, but it will never come back
Where the sun and birds and flowers are.

It has plunged to the deepest chasm of the sea,
And purple waves guard where it hides;
Gone, gone it has, and it will not come back to me
Though I wait for a million tides.

Once, long ago, it crept whispering to me,
But I was deaf and never knew
And now it is lost beyond the stars and the sea
That long that I would write to you.

Experiments in Fuel.

The idea of the "colloidal fuel" — a mixture of heavy oil with finely divided coal — which was burned in place of ordinary fuel oil under one of the boilers of the Cunard liner Scythia during a recent voyage across the Atlantic is not new; it dates back at least to 1913, and in 1918 it was put to practical tests extending over several months in a small United States vessel, the Gem. As the results of those experiments were described as satisfactory, and as the coal-oil mixture can give a fuel which is at least as good in heat value as plain oil and costs less because the coal it embodies is cheaper, the question arises why it has not hitherto come into general use, and the answer appears to be that means had not been found by which the stability of the mixture could be ensured and the coal dust prevented from separating from the oil in the course of time. It seems that this technical difficulty has been overcome, and that it is now possible to make a mixture that will remain stable for as long a period as is required for practical purposes. If that is so, ships and industry in general have at their disposal a liquid fuel which, besides being cheaper than plain oil, has the advantage from the national point of view that it provides a new outlet for coal and pro tanto reduces the amount of oil that need be imported from abroad. It would not, however, be difficult to exaggerate the benefits that may accrue to the British coal industry from the advent of colloidal fuel, even if no troubles arise in its manufacture and utilization and it proves to be completely interchangeable with oil as a fuel. In an address to the British Association, Sir John Cadman stated that of this country's imports of petroleum products, valued at £100,000,000, only £10,000,000 is accounted for by the use of kerosene and lamp oil, and a further £10,000,000 for motor fuel. The remainder, £80,000,000, is accounted for by the use of fuel oil for ships and industry. It is therefore evident that the adoption of colloidal fuel would be a boon of the first magnitude to the coal industry.

tons of oil were completely displaced by an equivalent amount of colloidal fuel, the consumption of coal, if it formed 40 per cent of the mixture, as in the Cunard Company's experiments, would be only some 800,000 tons a year. The total consumption of oil fuel, in British ships alone, must amount to a much larger figure, perhaps twelve million tons even in the present depressed state of shipping; but the balance is made up by bunkers taken on board in foreign ports, and even if it were to consist entirely of the coal-oil mixture British coalmines could not expect to supply the whole, or even a large part, of the coal required for its manufacture. If, on the other hand, the coal-oil proved so attractive and so cheap to make in this country that ships came to bunker it at our ports, the object of reducing oil imports would not be attained, though there would be increased consumption of British coal. Certainly the Cunard Company's experiments deserve to be watched with every hope for their complete success, since under present conditions anything that adds to the demand for our coal is to be warmly welcomed; but the consumption of coal would be promoted more effectively if the art of using it in the pulverized form, without the addition of oil, could be so developed as to lead to its extensive substitution for liquid fuel. The Secretary for Mines, stated in the House of Commons recently that pulverized fuel is being used in this country to a greater extent than is generally realized; but its marine application has made disappointingly slow progress, and it is therefore the more surprising that nothing has been heard of results obtained with the vessel which more than three years ago was offered by the Admiralty to the Department of Scientific and Industrial Research for experimental purposes. To promote an extended and progressive use of coal and its products, to make known the best ways of using it, and the latest appliances for consuming it, is one of the objects of the new Coal Commission, and it is one of the first steps towards the realization of its objects.

News in Brief.

At the meeting of the Rotary Club to-morrow, Professor L. Forster will speak on "Travelling in Szechuan."

The Rev. L. N. Watkins, Priest-in-charge of St. Peter's Church, preached his farewell sermon in St. Andrew's Church, Kowloon yesterday evening.

Colonel and Chief Paymaster D. G. N. T. Wimberley, R.A.P.C., disembarked at Singapore from the Glennace, from Hong Kong for temporary duty in Malaya.

An Organ Recital will be given by Mr. Rupert Baldwin, A.T.C.L., in St. Andrew's Church at 9 p.m. to-night. Mr. Baldwin will be assisted by Mr. J. W. Baldwin, Mr. F. W. Dann and Mr. H. J. Best.

While dozing on the floor of No. 24 Wing Lok Street, Leung Lai, a foki, saw a man stealing his clothing. The accused was given one month's hard labour in Central Police Court to-day.

Wing Chow, who once before had returned from banishment and had had three previous convictions, appeared again before Mr. Wynne-Jones this morning and was given four months' in gaol.

After the summer holiday break, the St. Andrew's Church branch of the Scripture Union will meet on Wednesday in the Church Hall at 6 p.m. The speaker will be the Rev. N. V. Howard, and his subject "The League of Nations—what it is and what it is doing."

EIGHT PERSONS LOST ON OCEAN FLIGHT

tic fliers, however, that they took their two little girls with them. Four men were added to the party, as a crew for the huge flying boat. Hutchison himself was a good pilot.

The first legs of their cruise were uneventful. They flew to Newfoundland, across Davis Straits, after coasting up Labrador, and landed safely in Greenland waters, near Cape Desolation. They proceeded to Julianashaab and there rested and waited for favourable weather, for at this period of the year there are frequent heavy fogs along the coast.

Engine Fails.

Apparently all was well for a flight on Saturday and they set off, climbing to soar over the rugged southern cape and reach the opposite coast. It was when they were within a few miles of their destination that they were forced down by engine trouble. Their machine, a big seaplane, may have been heavily loaded. Carrying six grown persons and two children, it must have been taxed even under ordinary conditions with the loads of fuel it must carry for long voyage. Just how long it could remain aloft in a set under the sudden gales which sweep the coast can only be conjectured.

(Seas Were Normal)

A later despatch from Angmagalik says that the Lord Tabot reached the position indicated in distress calls after only four hours of hard steering. There was no sign of any wreckage, nor of oil upon the water which might indicate that the plane had sunk. The position given by the distressed fliers was 65°23 North, 45 West.

The machine was ordinarily an amphibian type, and there was every reason to suppose that she could ride the average seas. It was not rough when she landed. Her landing gear, the undercarriage, had been detached when she stopped in Nova Scotia, and was sent to Edinburgh for later stages of the proposed flight.

Among other things, the Hutchisons intended touring Europe.

Started Last Month.
The "flying family," who took off from New York on August 22 for Edinburgh, Scotland, up to the time of their accident, the family completed the 500 miles hop from Hopetoun, Scotland, to Godthaab, Greenland, Sept. 4. Their journey had been the longest in the world, and they had received a warm welcome at Godthaab, where they were met by the local authorities and the press. The family consisted of the father, mother, and two children, and they were all well and happy.

LOCAL SHARE PRICES.

[To the Editor, "China Mail"]

Sir,—In one of their recent Summaries the Stock Exchange criticised what they call a "non-descript group" for "Bear attacks" on certain local stock, specially Green Island Cements and China Lights.

As the Stock Exchange's "puzzled aloofness" is of little use to their clients, it may perhaps be of interest to consider the Stocks mentioned and their real value from an Investors' view.

Cements paid a dividend last year of 51 cents per combined share. They have been as high as $20 per share, surely a figure out of all proportion. They owe money on their new plant, they owe money to the Bank and they are as most industrial concerns faced with very severe competition, possible strikes, breakdowns, exchange vagaries, in short all the ailments an industrial concern must cope with. Why then this high figure on Cement Shares? Simply because they have been boosted much too high.

The Cement Co. is undoubtedly a good concern doing good business and turning out good Cement, but they are unable to pay a dividend justifying these high prices. At par—$3.50 they are worth having with a dividend of 51 cents. At their present price $13 they are too high. I understand it is more than doubtful that they will pay a higher dividend this year, as a matter of fact one would hardly expect it seeing the Directors had to call up fresh Capital last month to pay off part of the outstandings on the plant. By the way, the final instalment on the plant is due at the beginning of 1934 and it is quite possible there will be a further call next year to meet this.

Smoke Nuisance Bogy.

I am fully aware of the value of the new plant and also of the company's property at Hok On, but to the shareholders the plant is only worth what it can produce in dividends on a sound basis, and the same applies to the property. There is also the everpresent possibility of the Cement Company having to vacate Hok On owing to the smoke nuisance, in which case the value of the property would have to be offset against a new site, buildings and loss of business during the time of transit. The G.I.C. shares being industrials should come down to a level where they give a return of 7 to 7½ per cent, and not 2½ per cent, as hitherto.

No Reserves.

The same remarks apply generally to the China Lights. Here we have a Company with a share Capital of $6,000,000—with no Reserves. Last year they paid a 50 cents dividend, in other words 2½ per cent, on $20.00, round about which figure they have been quoted till recently. As a matter of fact 12 months ago they were $33.00, ye boosters on Ice House Street.

It is granted that the China Light is a public utility Company and therefore in a somewhat different class to the Cement Company. But why these high prices on their shares? I hear their plant and machinery is getting old and soon needs considerable renewals, and they are negotiating with the present Managers, to give up the management for which a Compensation is to be given. The Compensation may be anything from $800,000 to $1,000,000—to be given the Managers in shares, a new issue, which again means the Company has to increase its earning power to be able to maintain the dividend on the increased Capital. They may be able to do so, but this increase of Capital will make it difficult to pay higher dividends and goodness knows the shareholders have been waiting long enough for a better return. And what will happen to the stock if the Managers decide to sell their shares after they have been allotted. I just ask you.

From the above I think it is quite clear that these Stocks have been quoted at much too high a figure and unless they come down to a basis which will give the shareholders a sound return on their money the Brokers cannot hope to retain the confidence and patronage of their clients.

"BEARISH."

HIDEOUS NOISES.

[To the Editor, "China Mail"]

Sir,—Cannot something be done to stop the hideous noises made by the thousand and one urchins selling Chinese Newspapers in the streets. This perpetual howling is becoming an unbearable nuisance. It penetrates our homes and our offices and is nerve racking. The cry is of such an ear-splitting nature, and its awful monotony is depressing to an extreme. Surely something could be done by the Powers that be?

Yours etc.,

FULL TEXT OF CHENG MURDER JUDGMENT

accused offered $10,000 to Christie if he would kill Fung; that Christie, Zimmern and the accused remain together during the day and discussed the possibility of killing Fung either by shooting or by the use of potassium cyanide the accused expressing his preference for shooting; that Christie purchased a hypodermic syringe and some potassium cyanide with money furnished by the accused and handed the same to the accused; that the accused encouraged Christie to carry out the proposal by the promise of the chauffeur's assistance, and also by alleging that being under 21 years of age Christie was not liable to capital punishment. Christie, Zimmern and the accused consulted one firm of solicitors, Messrs. Lo & Lo, to obtain, if they could a confirmation of this opinion of the law; and that Zimmern and Christie on the invitation of the accused and with money provided by him obtained two other solicitors' opinions. Further that on the 22nd March the accused told Zimmern and Christie that he had experimented upon a chicken with the hypodermic syringe and poison and that it had died but that he had damaged the syringe; also that at the request of the accused Christie then purchased a second syringe on his behalf which he delivered to the accused. Further that on the 25th March before 5 a.m. the accused who had given Zimmern $50 at the same time gave Zimmern a further $10 to give to Christie. Firstly that on the evening of the 24th March Zimmern produced to the accused the receipt given by Messrs. Lo and Lo, Solicitors, for their professional fee and that the accused destroyed this paper.

Deny Murder Intent.

Zimmern and Christie have disclaimed any intention of killing Fung and have said their object was to obtain by fraud the money of the accused.

The evidence was not in fact analysed by Counsel before us in the above detail but I am satisfied that I have set it out with sufficient accuracy for the present purpose.

It is to be observed that the evidence to which objection is taken primarily discloses a criminal incitement by the accused which forms no part of the particulars given in the indictment itself. The evidence relates to an incitement of different persons from those named in the indictment and also an incitement to use an alternative to the use of fire-arms different in kind from those in fact used by the persons named in the indictment. It describes also an incitement which was never effectual as the witnesses themselves at no time intended to kill Fung. Moreover, the incitement is not a link in the chain of evidence alleged to have led from the criminal intent of the accused through the channel of his chauffeur Lau's activities to the murder of Fung. The story told in this evidence discloses crimes other than the crime charged which may be separately designated and punished.

The relevance of this evidence to this prosecution has been questioned before us for these reasons and the admissibility has been challenged on the plea that it has been used to prove complicity in the alleged offence by showing complicity in a distinct but similar offence. It is salutary here to recall the advice of Viscount Birkenhead (which is to be found in "Rutherford v. Richardson" 1923 A.C. 5) who there said "The issues pronounced upon by Courts in criminal . . . matters are attended with such decisive consequences that the adoption in matters of evidence of a standard of admissibility which is so cautious as to be meticulous may not only be defended but is in fact essential."

In my opinion the evidence was rightly received.

Denies Defence Pleas

I have reached the conclusion that the contention by the defence that the evidence to which objection is taken forms a distinct transaction from the transaction under consideration cannot be sustained. Evidence has to be received not merely in accordance with a standard of its appropriateness to prove a conclusion for which the prosecution contends; but also because whatever its appropriateness in the adjudication it in fact belongs to the story to which the attention of the Court is drawn. Such evidence is admitted in the language of legal textbooks as part of the res gestae. Almost all the evidence in this case has been received as part of the res gestae. The evidence which is the subject of the objection is no exception. It is a part of the story which the Court is to judge. Each case has its own features.

The Chief Justice, Sir Joseph Kemp, K.C., who read his judgment in the Full Court this morning, concurring with the Puisne Judge, in affirming the conviction of Cheng Kwok-yau.

by saying that an . . . act is admissible because it is part of the res gestae has never, so far as I am aware, been explained in a satisfactory manner. I suspect it of being a phrase adopted to provide a respectable legal cloak for a variety of cases to which no formula of precision can be applied. The term nevertheless affords an efficient classification of material. It is fundamental in the law of evidence. The authoritative statement of the law is to be found in Stephen's Digest of the Law of Evidence 7th Edition (1906) Article 3 which is as follows:—

"(Relevancy of facts forming part of the same transaction as the facts in issue). A transaction is a group of facts so connected together as to be referred to by a single legal name, as a crime. . . . Every fact which is part of the same transaction as the facts in issue is deemed to be relevant to the issue, although it may not be actually in issue."

He adds:— "Whether any particular fact is or is not part of the same transaction as the facts in issue is a question of law upon which no principle has been stated by authority and on which single judges have given different decisions."

(See also 13 Halsbury "Laws of England" p. 420 par. 585). In less technical language a similar statement of the law is to be found in 9 Halsbury "Laws of England" p. 380 par. 740:—

"The evidence must be confined to the facts which constitute or are connected with the offence charged and proof cannot generally be given by other facts which have no connection with this offence. If, however, there are other facts which are so inextricably mixed up with the facts which constitute the offence charged as to form one transaction, proof may be given of such other facts. . . . All the details of the alleged criminal transaction are relevant to the case for the prosecution as being part of the res gestae and should be proved." The learned author in 13 Halsbury "Laws of England" p. 437 par. 609 also states:—

"In testifying to the matters in issue . . . witnesses must state them not in their barest possible form, but with a reasonable fullness of detail and circumstance."

Rules of Procedure A judicial statement of the doctrine is contained in the judgment of Kennedy J. delivered in the report of R. v. Bond (C.C.R.) 1906 2 K.B. at page 400:—

"The general rule (the rule excluding prior criminal conduct of the accused from the evidence) cannot be applied where the facts which constitute distinct offences are at the same time part of the transaction which is the subject of the indictment. Evidence is necessary, admissible, and relevant which are so closely and inextricably mixed up with the story of the guilty act as to form part of one chain of relevant circumstances, and so could not be excluded in the presentment of the case before the jury without the evidence being thereby rendered unintelligible. . . . Such prior acts formed in point of history and circumstantial connection, inseparable parts of the transaction which the jury had to investigate. . . . The relations of the murdered man . . . to his assailant, so far as they may reasonably be treated as explanatory of the conduct of the accused as charged in the indictment, are properly admitted to proof as integral parts of the history of the alleged crime for which the accused is on his trial."

I should like to have suggested to the learned judge in this connection that the use of the word "unintelligible" here narrows the field too rigidly and that the word "incomplete" might take its place. The prosecution has a right to tell "the whole story of the prisoner's doings" (Russell "Crimes" 7th Edition p. 2101) or "everything that may be fairly considered an incident of the event" (Taylor "Evidence" 11th Edition par. 583).

Like a Play. I have found a striking illustration in the prologue of a modern play—John Van Druten's "Somebody Knows," where a character in discussion with a novelist is made to say "It's like one of those novels. I don't mean the kind you write but the sort where the author says 'He came in, closed the door and faced her' and that's the end of the chapter and the next one begins 'Ten days later. . . . I always want to say 'But you're cheating. You've got to tell us what happened.'"

The demarcation of any transaction by the judge is perhaps a point on which little help may be derived from precedent. To quote a dictum of Earl Loreburn in "Kerr or Lendrum v. Ayr Steam Shipping Company Limited" 1916 A.C. at p. 223 the learned judge there remarked "Nor am I impressed by arguments proceeding upon a comparison between the facts of one case and the facts of another. Precedents are valuable and authoritative when they lay down a principle. They are otherwise merely illustrations of the way in which judges look at facts. . . . Different judges look at facts differently." In the same report is to be found also a comment of Lord Finlay (quoted from "Craig v. Glasgow Corporation 1919 S.C. (H.L.) 1. "No inquiry is more idle than one which is devoted to seeing how nearly the facts of cases come together. The use of cases is for the proposition of law they contain. The remark already cited from Stephen's Digest of the Law of Evidence may be true but it casts no reflection on judges. Each case has its own features."

Clear Examples. Certain cases stand out as clear examples. In "R. v. Shogren" (1895) 1 Q.B. 47 the prisoner was indicted for obtaining money by false pretences. The facts were that the prisoner had obtained money from a woman by telling her that he was a doctor and that he had a cure for her ailment. The facts were held to be part of the transaction and were admissible.

In "R. v. Fisher" (1910) 1 K.B. 149 the charge was for defrauding A by false pretences in connection with a sale of porcelain. Reference was made in cross-examination of the accused to other and different false pretences by which it was alleged the accused had fraudulently obtained money on other occasions but also from A and also on a sale of porcelain. It was held that the question was asked in breach of the Criminal Evidence Act 1898 S. 1 S.S. (f). In other words it was held that this was a series of separate fraudulent transactions and not one fraudulent business. "There was no systematic course of swindling by the same methods" (Bray J. at p. 761) (see also "R. v. Fisher" 1910 1 K.B. 149).

Conduct Important. To apply the doctrine to the present case. The transaction under inquiry is the murder of George Fung. The story of the transaction commenced from the desertion of the accused by Lai Ming-fai and culminated in the death of George Fung. The conduct of the accused during this interval of time is an incident of this event. Any person listening to the narrative told by the witnesses so far as the evidence has been received without question, would naturally inquire "Between the abortive attempt by his chauffeur's agents on the 19th March to murder Fung and their successful attempt with his chauffeur's support upon the 24th March, what was the accused himself doing in the meantime?" Without this evidence the story, to use the word I have suggested, would be "incomplete." The evidence comes under Stephen's classification "Evidence deemed to be relevant to the issue." It is one piece of the puzzle which the jury are entitled to handle and fit into the whole to the best of their ability.

Not Restricted.

It is not necessary to emphasize the fact that the prosecution is not debarred from telling the whole story of the prisoner's doings merely because it includes other of his criminal acts not specially charged in the indictment. (Russell "Crimes" 7th Edition p. 2011 cited above). The same remark applied to all evidence adduced "whether strictly relevant or merely deemed to be so."

However the argument for the Crown before us has been directed to showing the strict relevancy of this evidence to the main issue, whether the facts are to be included in one transaction with the charge laid in the indictment, or not, and in my view this contention will also prevail.

This is a case of criminal homicide. The Crown alleges that the accused through Lau murdered Fung. The facts in issue which the Crown must prove are four in number.

1. That Fung was murdered.
2. That he was murdered through Lau.
3. That Lau himself had a principal.
4. That this principal was the accused.

The first and second of these facts are not here in doubt. That Lau himself is the agent of someone else has been shown by the absence of any motive of his own and by his control of large sums of money for the purpose of his crime. The question arising here is upon the fourth issue. The problem has become one of identity—of the identity of the accused with a criminal known alibi to exist. To prove the identity with the actual perpetrator of a person sought to be implicated in criminal homicide, proof of his hostility towards the deceased is relevant evidence. The evidence herein of Zimmern and Christie to which objection has been taken is such matter and is admissible.

Evidence of Hostility.

Some argument has been advanced on the definition of the exact issue to which this evidence is related. For the Crown it has been suggested that the evidence of hostility is available to prove the fact that Lau, who is named in the indictment, was in fact incited by someone. In support of this contention it is argued that the evidence of hostility is available to prove the fact that Lau, who is named in the indictment, was in fact incited by someone. In support of this contention it is argued that the evidence of hostility is available to prove the fact that Lau, who is named in the indictment, was in fact incited by someone.

you can prove previous acts, or words of the accused to show he entertained feelings of enmity towards the deceased, and that is evidence not merely of the malicious mind with which he killed the deceased, but of the fact that he killed him. You can give in evidence the enmity of the accused towards the deceased's life. Evidence of motive necessarily goes to prove the fact of the homicide by the accused. This dictum was also repeated by Lord Atkinson (in "Thompson v. The King" 1918 A.C. at p. 227) where he said in his judgment "In a case of homicide . . . evidence is admissible to prove that the accused entertained feelings of hatred towards, or a desire to be revenged upon the deceased, in order to prove that he killed the deceased, not merely quo animo he did so." This dictum as it seems to me can only be interpreted to mean what when a homicide has been proved enmity against the deceased may be used to connect an accused person with it. (See also 13 Halsbury "Laws of England" p. 447 par. 621). The matter has been stated also in 9 Halsbury "Laws of England" page 378, para 740 in the following terms "The prosecution must first give a satisfactory proof of the corpus delicti i.e. that the offence charged has been committed by someone. The prosecution must then prove that the defendant is the person who committed the offence charged. Any facts which affirmatively prove either of these propositions are relevant evidence for the prosecution." In neither of the two cases reported, from which the dictum of Lord Atkinson has been quoted, was the evidence then under discussion admitted that prove the corpus delicti. The proper use of the evidence of hostility in the present case is to establish the identity of the accused with the offender sought to be identified, and the evidence is held admissible for this purpose.

Case Properly Left

In his summing up that learned Chief Justice distinguished to the jury at the outset the two issues, the fact of the incitement of Lau and the identity of his inciter.

That the case was properly left to the jury on sufficient evidence is to my mind abundantly clear. As Lord Buckmaster has remarked (I quote again from Craig v. Glasgow Corporation cited supra) "If a set of circumstances are actually consistent with a number of varying hypotheses no one can be selected as the one that is true." The standard of proof which a jury in a criminal trial must require is described in 9 Halsbury "Laws of England" p. 588 para. 1190 "A jury must be satisfied. . . that the facts were such as to be inconsistent with any other rational conclusion than that he (i.e. the accused) was the guilty person."

The duty of the trial judge is to see to it that the verdict of the jury is given, after proper instruction in their functions, not in the field of supposition and conjecture but of facts and inference. He may recognize that the jury have before them a choice of alternative inferences all of which may be reasonable and he must explain to them the principles of selection which should guide them but he must not constitute himself a judge of fact in their place. The indictment submitted to this jury was in fact supported by cogent evidence even say by convincing evidence. The jury in this case saw the witnesses and I have not seen them. But in these proceedings I have not been invaded by any doubt that the verdict of the jury may not have been both rationally, and to their minds necessarily, given.

In my opinion the evidence of Zimmern and Christie which we are asked to reject was rightly admitted and the case for the Crown was properly left to the jury.

The verdict must in my view be allowed to stand.

LAWN BOWLS SEASON REVIEWED

Amazing Advance Of Recreio.

CRAIGENGOWER'S HONOUR

[By SHORT HEAD]

Saturday's matches in the Lawn Bowls League concluded yet another year of Lawn Bowls, bringing to an end a season that has been marked with surprises, and one that has made Lawn Bowls history in the Colony.

Craigengower are to be congratulated on their splendid consistency and on the setting of a precedent by winning both League honours. With three of their players in the Interport team, Messrs. B. W. Bradbury, U. M. Omar and G. L. Buchanan, the Colony's hopes of returning from Shanghai with the flag look very bright.

The Kowloon Bowling Green Club deserve offers of condolences, and wishes for better fortunes next season, for it must not be forgotten that they were the pioneer Bowling Club in the Colony.

RECREIO'S TRIUMPHS.

The Recreio, too, have achieved a double honour. By sterling play they won the Spey Royal Cup for the first time in the history of the Club, while L. A. Gutierrez lifted the Open Championship on Thursday last when he defeated H. Nish of the K. B. G. C. while R. F. Luz gave the Portuguese club the third place.

In addition, they have gained second place in the First Division League. Their efforts this season rank with Craigengower.

Reviewing the Open Championship, probably the greatest surprise was the defeat of "Freddie" Cullen, the veteran Kowloon Dock bowler, by L. de Rome in the second round. Cullen, who won the Championship in 1925 is one of the most seasoned Lawn Bowls players in the Colony, and has figured prominently in the uphill fight made by the Dock team this year. He was one of the Hong Kong skips for the Interport games here last year.

The defeat of U. M. Omar, winner of the Championship last year and in 1923, in the second round, was also in the nature of a surprise, but he was faced with sterling opposition against A. M. Holland, who lifted the Open in 1930. Their game was one of the best in the series, and the score, 21-17 gives a fair indication of the game.

BIGGEST VICTORY.

To W. Russell, who figured as the Colony Champion 20 years ago, goes the honour of inflicting the most overwhelming defeat. He scored 21 shots to two against H. F. Stoneham in the first round, and it was only poetic justice when he was defeated 21-4 by A. W. Grimmit in the third round.

The latter named player has been conspicuous throughout the Championship for the inflicting of crushing defeats. His scores, until he met Luz in the fourth round, read, 22-2, 21-4, 21-4. He looked a potential winner until he met the Recreio star, who beat him by a single shot, in the closest game of the year.

H. Nish, the runner-up this year, enjoyed fairly easy victories until he entered the Final, and his defeat by seven shots on the K.C.C. green, in the final match came as a surprise to many. The game however, was more evenly contested than the score would lead one to believe. Bradbury, whose keenness is a byword at Craigengower, fell a victim to Russell in the second round, losing the game by five shots, while C. J. Tatchi, the popular secretary of the Lawn Bowls Association succumbed to Peter Farrell in the Second Round, after gaining a narrow two shot victory over F. Jones in the First Round.

NORTHERN NEWS AWAITED.
A. H. Oswick, of the Civil Service team, who reached the Semi-Final, showed good form and was assisted by a walk-over from A. K. Taylor in the Second Round.

There are many other participants in the game who are worthy of mention, but space will not permit a detailed resume of the whole season's activities. As has been said before, the 1932 season has been one of surprises and new history, and it can safely be predicted that next season will be even more enthusiastic lined up to make even greater history in the game that has done so much to foster comradeship in the Colony.

Noronha Brings Espy Home For $96.70

Close Finishes Witnessed At Macao Meeting

FAVOURITES UNPLACED

A large crowd of racing enthusiasts came back from Macao yesterday after enjoying a good afternoon of in and out racing. The course was slightly wet on account of the recent rains, and one or two upsets were accordingly recorded.

A. W. Roza proved to be the most successful rider, having two wins to his credit, but J. E. Noronha had the distinction of returning the best dividend — $96.70 for a win on Mr. Woo Lai-tin's Espy. L. G. Frost, the champion jockey, rode a winner and a second in four races.

Full results of the Fourth Extra Meeting were as follows:—

VINES BEATS COCHET IN STRAIGHT SETS.

To Win American Title.

Forest Hills, to-day. Ellsworth Vines, the Wimbledon champion, defeated the redoubtable Henri Cochet in straight sets to win the American National Singles Championship for the second year in succession. The scores were 6-4, 6-4, 6-4.—Reuter.

The aggressive style of Vines again triumphed over Cochet, just as it did in the Challenge Round of the Davis Cup in Paris. Vines has now met Cochet on two occasions and has been successful both times.

Vines is now the No. 1 of amateur tennis, having won at Wimbledon and at Forest Hills. The only player of note on the Continent whom Vines did not meet was G. Von Prenn, the German player. In his tour of the British Isles this Summer Vines met with only two reverses—at the hands of H. O. Hopman, the Australian player, in the London Championships, and Jean Borotra, the agile Frenchman, in the Challenge Round of the Davis Cup.

TIENTSIN WIN INTERPORT.

Dr. Ohlwein Breaks China Record.

Tientsin, To-day. In the swimming interport Tientsin beat Shanghai by 59 points to 19.

In the 100 yards backstroke, the German Tientsin interport swimmer, Dr. Ohlwein, established a new China and Hong Kong interport record by covering the distance in 70 seconds.—Reuter.

It was only last week that Jim Johnstone, the Hong Kong swimmer, set up a new record for the 100 yards backstroke when he won the championship for this event at Shanghai. His time was 75 and four-fifths seconds, which was 8 and two-fifths better than the previous record. Johnstone accompanied the Shanghai swimmers to Tientsin. The world record for the 100 yards backstroke is 64 and four-fifths.

POLICE OFFICER POISONED.

Overdose Of Opium
Causes Death.

AN EXCELLENT RECORD

Suspected to have swallowed an overdose of opium, Police Constable Hwang Hsueh-foo, of the Shantung contingent of the Hong Kong Police Force, died in the Kowloon Hospital last night.

Deceased was attached to the Anti-Piracy Guard, and was stationed at the Police Training School, Mongkok. He was removed to hospital shortly after 11 p.m.

He joined the Force in August 1929, being recruited from Wei Hai Wei City. In January this year, he was commended by the Inspector General of Police for alertness in chasing and capturing a Chinese man, who had broken into 161 Tung Choi Street. The culprit was subsequently sentenced to six months' hard labour.

Deceased joined the Anti-Piracy Guard in February this year, having formerly been stationed at Central and Mongkok Police Stations.

WATCHMAN KILLED IN GUN DUEL.

10 Shots Fired During Quarrel.

District Watchman Lai Chuen died in hospital yesterday, from a bullet wound in the abdomen, received in a gun duel with another District Watchman, Shiu Kwan-chiu, just below the West Point Police Station, in the early hours of Sunday morning.

Both men were attached to the Secretariat for Chinese Affairs and detailed for duty in the Western district of the Colony.

Lai Chuen had been on patrol since 6 p.m. on Saturday evening, and was to be relieved by Shiu Kwan-chiu at midnight. It appears that the two men quarrelled but who actually fired first, is not known. One man fired six shots, and the other four. Lai was struck in the arm and abdomen. Shiu was slightly injured in the left elbow.

A great stir was created in the district, and when Police arrived on the scene, they found Lai in a critical condition. Both men were removed to Hospital, where Lai Chuen died shortly after 3 p.m.

The dying depositions of Lai were taken later in the morning. Police investigations are proceeding.

JEWELLERY SHOP IS ROBBED.

Watches Stolen From Show Window.

In a report made to the Police, to-day, Mr. C. E. Bacci, manager of Messrs. Sennett Freres, Gloucester Building, stated that between 7 and 11 o'clock yesterday morning, some person or persons broke his shop window and stole a number of wrist watches, the total value of which is at present unknown.

BASEBALL.

FOXX LEADS HOME RUN PARADE WITH 51

Homer Yesterday Gives Phillies Victory.

YANKEES SURPRISED

New York, To-day.
Jimmy Foxx is hot on the trail of Babe Ruth's 1927 record of 60 home runs in a season. Yesterday he banged out his fifty-first to give the Phillies a narrow win over the Tigers.

Boston Braves registered two brilliant wins against the Reds, winning the first game of their double-header by 13 to 3, Holland hitting a four-bagger, and scoring 10 to 1 in their second game, Moore providing a circuit hit.

The Cubs beat the Dodgers, Hartnett hitting a homer to give his side a 3 to 1 win. Bill Terry, Veyez and Critz made merry against the Cardinals pitches in the first game of their double-header, but the world series champions turned the tables on the Giants in their second encounter, Marcuso Clouting a homer. Pucinelli hit a home run for the Cardinals in their first game.

Reynolds hit a magnificent homer to enable the Senators to gain the verdict over the White Sox in their second game to record a good double. After being out-hit the Indians surprised the Yankees, who are now without the services of Babe Ruth who is suffering from a mild attack of appendicitis, and snatched a narrow win by 5 to 4.

After losing their first game against the Browns the Red Sox recovered splendidly in their second effort and a home run by Alexander gave them an 8 to 3 verdict.

The following were the results of yesterday's Baseball games:—

PENINSULA CONCERT WELL RECEIVED.

Augmented Orchestra's Wonderful Music.

MANY GUESTS ATTEND

In spite of the races at Macao and other week end attractions, the largest crowd ever to assemble for a symphonic concert at the Peninsula Hotel, gathered in the lounge to listen to an augmented orchestra, under the leadership of Mr. J. L. Gecks, A.R.C.M., B.M., last night.

The most beautiful and most dramatic number was the "Overture of 1812" by Tchaikowsky. This was heartily received by the audience.

An arrangement by Noel Coward, "British Fantasia," followed the first selection, Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony." This proved to be quite a diversion to the heavy symphony just completed. It bordered a little on the moderne, but it contained the usual war time songs, plus a good number of old favourites and met with approval.

Part I and II was led by the orchestra's usual leader, Mr. A. Gellman. Drigo's Serenade, Les Millions D'Arlequin, was perhaps the most beautiful of their six selections. The composition, "Post in the Forest," with its novel echo effect, was also one of the highlights of the programme. Mr. J. Fiocchi gave the trumpet solo.

The concert concluded with selections from the "Firefly," by Friml. A few of those present to hear the concert were:

Major and Mrs. Lochner, Major Guys, Lt. Colonel Bennet and Mrs. Bennet, Colonel Goodwin Austin, Mr. C. R. Ferrajolo, Italian Consul, Mr. I. Day, Mr. and Mrs. Stopani, Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall, Mr. Li Choy-chu, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. McTavish, and Mr. E. Lewis Robertson.

THIEF WELCOMED BACK TO GAOL.

Only Free For One
Night's Work.

Something in the way of records might be claimed by Wong Ping, an old offender who is losing his skill, it appears.

He was released from gaol on Friday evening, having served a stiff sentence. Possibly because he was out of practice and clumsy, he was apprehended Saturday morning while making off with clothing valued at $12.

He admitted the theft, but explained that it was necessary, since he had to have money with which to return to his home in the country. Magistrate Wynones sent him back among his comrades in the cells for another four months.

OCCASIONAL RAIN

To-day's weather report from the Royal Observatory states:—

Pressure is highest to the North-east of Hokkaido, and relatively low over the Northern China Sea.

The depression appears to have filled up.
Forecast:—N.E. winds, moderate; cloudy, occasional rain.
